NEWS SUMMARY.

Local Affairs.

The Hon. Schuyler Colfax, Vice-President slect of the United States, arrived at Camden, N. J., on Saturday evening, about 9 o'clock, from New York. Notwithstanding the fact that his arrival was entirely universalled, the news spread like wildfire, and a number of his admirers made arrangemen a at once to give him an imprompta serenade. The services of a brass band procured at a late hour, and, accompanied by a large crowd, the band proceeded to the residence of Jadge Woodhull, of the New Jersey Supreme Court, where Mr. Colfax is stopping, and a screna le was tendered.

Mr. Cot ax had retired for the night, but after repeated calls he made his appearance at the bed-room window, and made his acknowledgments for the compliment paid him. He tuen proceeded to make a short speech, during which he advocated liberty for all, justice for all, and protection for all. Mr. Collax was loudly cheered during his remarks and when he retired. The crowd then proceeded to the residence of the Hon. James M. Scovel, who made

LONDON, Nov. 7.—The case of Miss Becker, who appeared before the Registration Board some time since and claimed the right to vote in the coming election, and was refused by the Registrars, has been taken before the courts for adjudication. This movement was made en behalf of the women of the district to establish a precedent for female suffrage. The case was argued at great length to-day in the Court of Common Pleas, before a full bench, Sir G. Boveli presiding, and Mr. Coleridge supporting and Mr. Mellish opposing the claim. There is much anxiety to learn the decision of the court, which will be rendered on Monday next.

igade of infantry will sail for Havana on the 15th instant.
General Dulce has postponed his departure or Cuba until December. Madrid, Nov. 8 .- Marshal Serrano has confirmed the appointment of General Prim as Commander-u-Chief of the armies of Spain. Markin, Nov. 8,-At a meeting of republicans in this city vestorday, it was decided that the party should vote against a monarchy at the ng elections. Prim has issued a circular to the military commanders, reminding them that it is proper that soldiers should take part in politia meetings. LONDON, Nov. 8. — Despatches from Italy report that the Papal army continues to be depleted by descritons, which are on the increase.

LITERARY ITEMS.

UNPUBLISHED VERSES BY PRIOR .- The following verses by Matthew Prior (says the London Athenoum) do not appear in the earlier or later editions of his poetical works. They occur in George Stepney's Letter-Book, preserved in the Public Record Office, and in all probability were written in the year 1694, when the poet was Secretary to the Embassy at the Hague; his friend Stepney being at that time the King's Commissary and Deputy at

The "pious Meaux" referred to in the lines was Bossuet, Bishop of Meaux, justly celebrated for his elequence, and "John Bart" was the celebrated privateer of Dunkirk, who had distinguished himself by many brilliant exploits at sea. In the year 1694 a numerous fletilla from the Baltie, laden with corn for France, was seized by the Dutch admiral, when "John Bart," at the mouth of the Texel, made a dash at the Dutch admiral's ship, bearded her, and retook the whole fleet of three hundred vessels. The news of this victory seen spread throughout Europe, and the arrival of the corn vessels was anxiously expected in France when Prior wrote these verses. The reader interested in the career of "John Bart" will find a characteristic sketch of him in Macaulay's "History of England."

Prior's Song on ye Famine in France, to ye tune of "Bright was Morning."

To pious Meaux great Louis sayd, With Lenten countenance "Wee have but little flower to knead
The doot lines you advance,
And if our God be in our bread,
H-hi soon forsake poor France,"

"Sr., the beleff, if well embraced," Says Meaux, "might do us good, Bless all your meat to have it last, Dubb every loof a god;

'Tis your new converts make such waste, They crain down bread for food," "Faith," quoth the King, "this good design

Some little help will give, And all your wafers, like your coyn, Shall my newstamp receive. The clergy first will freely joyn To pay if they balleye.

"Sr., as for bread, next northern breeze May bring us John Bart home; If not, least heathen thoughts like these It to your breast should come.

You shall believe e'en what you please, And gain your point at Rome The tune of "Bright was Morning" is not noticed in Mr. Chappell's valuable work, at least not in the first edition. George Stepney (an intimate friend of the Duke of Dorset, Charles Montague, Earl of Halifax, Matthew Prior, and other poets and literary men of his day) was constantly employed in foreign missions and embassies from 1691 to 1707. In his Letter-Book, preserved in he Public Record Office, are copies of his

-S. V. Ryan was yesterday consecrated as the I own poetical pieces, several of Matthew Prior's shorter poems, and one or two by the Duke of Dorset. -A Mr. H. R. Forrest writes as follows to the London Athenceum about the pronunciation of Chancer:-

"From 1824-27 I was a student of Emanuel von Fellenberg, at Hofwyl, Switzerland, the celebrated originator of ragged schools, through his assistant Wehrli. The second son of E. v. Fellenberg, who, alas! lived the life of a meteor, brilliant but short, passed a few terms at Oxford. In English literature Chancer was his great hobby, and on his return to his native home he used to narrate to his old chums, amengst whom I was one, how he had astonished the then dons of Oxford by accentuating Chaucer's language according to the old French pronunciation. In Chaucer's time French was the polite language of the day. Saxon was asserting its own right, and eventually contracted a left-handed marriage with Norman-French, and the result has been like most such marriages. Some look to the father, and some to the mother, as being of the purer blood. In conclusion, allow me to state my opinion that the student of Chancer cannot effectually understand his master unless he be well versed in old Plat-Deutch. Young Fellenberg used to read off glibly passages which have caused many annotators to worry their brains in vain and waste much useful ink."

-Astronomy is waking up in Holland, and the evidence appears in a well-printed quarto from the Observatory of Leyden, under the title "Appalen der Sternwarte in Leiden." This, the first volume of a series, is brought out under the supervision of Dr. F. Kaiser, Professor of Astronomy in the University and Director of the Observatory. An introduction of 132 pages, written in German, embedies a history of astrenomy in the Netherlands, a description of the observatory-which, judging from the vignette on the title-page, is a spacious and hardsome building-and of the instruments; and is followed by tables of observations with the meridian-circle. Is Leyden about to become as famous for astronomy as in past times for its classics?
